The APN is all the information your phone uses to connect with your carrier's network. It lists the address your phone uses to connect to the network, the ports used to handle Multimedia Messaging Service (MMS) messages, the type of data that particular APN uses, and other pieces of information to make sure your phone works correctly.

What is an APN, and How Do I Change it on my Android Phone?

Apple Push Notification service (APNs) is the centerpiece of the remote notifications feature. It is a robust, secure, and highly efficient service for app developers to propagate information to iOS (and, indirectly, watchOS), tvOS, and macOS devices.

Local and Remote Notification Programming Guide: APNs Overview

Location specific portal applets like Whereis are also affected. The cause of this problem is a little complex, but in essence, to access those sites your phone needs to connect through a proxy, and standard Android has issues with using proxies attached to APNs. This bug is (as far as I can tell) fixed for Desire, but not for standard Android.
